Main topic:

A cooperative word game where players assist each other in composing meaningful words from letters around the table.

Short description/ Goal of the game:

Each player gets a pile of letter cards. From those cards, she secretly chooses five to make a word out of. Once everyone has made a word, you pass the five cards closed to the player to your right. That player will now guess your word. You guess the word by giving each other hints. And with that comes cooperation in this game. Beforehand, you discuss who has good hints and what kind of hints they are.

Recommendations for use:

Pro's & Contra's:

- (-) Hints can go wrong as the 'hint-giver' doesn't have the right spelling.
- (+) great way to practice spelling + logical thinking. Let people work in teams to give them extra control over the spelling-part.
